

Prepared article for publishing and first doctoral colloquium

1. The student is required to prepare an article for publishing in the magazine during the fourth semester, where he will announce the first results of the research. Student sends the pre-final version of the article to all candidates from the generation and all members of mentoring commissions and announces the basic findings at a joint meeting (the first doctoral colloquium of all candidates and all commissions. After each work, a discussion takes place. A PhD student prepares a scientific article which is a precondition to be qualified for submitting the doctoral dissertation and for assessing the public defense. At the same time the doctoral colloquium serves that students get to know the work of other colleagues, as well as to hear certain suggestions, but also to answer the asked questions, which is a way to prepare for the final public defense of the dissertation.
2. A PhD student has prepared an article for publishing in the journal, where he announced the first results of his research, and almost at the same time fulfilled the requirement to publish an article in an international or national scientific journal. Based on the presentation of the work and the discussion conducted, student can make appropriate corrections of the work.
3. The content is a scientific article and a presentation, or a discussion about the article
4. Study research work with public announcement of results and debate about them.
